The Columbian Mirror
AND ALEXANDRIA GAZETTE.

FROM THE FEDERAL GAZETTE.

THE letters of the late minister plenipotentiary to the republic of France, to Colonel Pickering, secretary of state, are likely to occasion a considerable stir in our county. There are no less than three discarded constables, and a crier of the court, who have called upon the worshipful the justices to give their reasons to them and the public, for removing them from their offices. Nay, this spirit is gone so far, that the sexton of the parish, in which I live, has put in his claim to have his case publicly discussed, alledging, that the vestry have turned him out of office, without assigning any cause for such usage. Indeed, I am informed, that in the neighbouring county it is proposed by one, who lately held a public office, but had the misfortune to have an untimely successor put in his place, to call a meeting of all that unfortunate class of citizens in the county, in order to make a general attack at once upon their oppressors. Having procured a copy of the letter of Thomas Gripe, one of the late constables of the county above alluded to, to the justices of the court, I shall take the liberty of inserting it here.

TO THE WORSHIPFUL THE JUSTICES OF ——— COUNTY COURT.

GENTLEMEN,

AS you have pleased to take from me my constable's staff, without so much as giving me a reason for the same and thereby have done my reputation great mischief in the opinion of my fellow citizens, I thus publicly call upon you to satisfy me, and all the world, why you have acted in this outrageous arbitrary manner. My character, which was before as fair to look to as any man's in the whole county, has received a deep stab by your behavior in my behalf. But, this I tell you, I am determined to have justice done me. My dear countrymen will never stand tamely by, and see my good name blasted by you, or any other set of men, let them call themselves what they will. Mayhap you think, because the law gives you a power to make constables and turn them out when you please, that you can do all this without first satisfying the man you turn out, that you are doing right. But I will let your worship know, that I had as much right to my office as you have to yours, and that you can't lawfully take away my place, without giving me a good and lawful reason for it, and such a one, to boot, as I may be contented with. This you have not yet done, nor did you even consult me about the matter at all, but did it all secretly, and out of your own heads. I have heard a great deal of talk about freedom and liberty, and what not, but if this be liberty, the Lord have mercy upon all poor constables, I say—I once again call upon you, worshipful gentlemen, to let me know my crime. Did I ever flinch from my duty? Did I ever refuse to serve a warrant even upon an old friend, or acquaintance? Did I ever finger a bribe, or pretend not to see a man although he was in the same room with me, over a cup of whiskey? No, I defy you to say I ever did any thing the like of that. Howsomever, though you may not like to tell why you have so shamefully used me, I am not such a fool but I can partly guess why. Every body knows that I was sent by your worship to a mustering field, to keep the peace of the county and I can take my solemn affidavit I did all that man could do, and though I say it, there is not a man in the whole county (be him who he will) could do more. For all this my enemies say, that instead of bearing myself as a good constable ought to do, that I made one in every wrangle; that I forgot the errand I was sent on, and who sent me; that I seemed as if I went there to serve a set of people in the county, who were not the best friends to its peace and happiness, and that I shewed more love for them, than for all the rest of the county put together. Instead of standing up for your worship, and the court, as I ought to do, they say I was the first to find fault, and abuse you.

I have no doubt, from what my best friends tell me, that my enemies have set your worships against me, by telling you such stories as this. If so be, that all this be true, I make bold to ask, would it not have been becoming in your worships to give me some warning of these matters? Suppose you had sent me a letter after this fashion:—"Dear Mr. Gripe, such and such things are said of you; pray be so kind as to let us know whether they be true or false, that we may act according."

Yours, &c.

These few words would have made up matters in a twinkle, and I should not have been put to the need of writing this, or of calling upon my dear fellow citizens at large, which I am positively bent to do—for no true-spirited republican, will ever put up with such base usage.

I am,

Your worships humble servant,

THOMAS GRIPE.

The addresses of the other two gentlemen of the staff, differ from the above in nothing but their language, except that one of them not only assures himself of success in his public appeal, but threatens their worships with the dire resentment of his fellow-citizens.

The Crier thinks his usage particularly hard, for no man in the community, he says, except those of his own profession, has given such uniform, loud, and public proofs of attachment to his country, as he has done, which every one who attends the court, can attest. For there was not a meeting of the same, whereat he did not publicly, and even to the detriment of his lungs, pray for the state and the worshipful bench. This consideration alone, he thinks, ought to have inclined their worships to have been more tender in their treatment to him. However, he expects great favor, on this score, from his fellow-citizens.

I have not been able to get a sight of the address of Paul Mattock, the sexton, to the vestry, by whom he has been so unjustifiably treated, as he apprehends; but I understand he intends to postpone laying his case before the public, until he sees the fate of the minister plenipotentiary's appeal, thinking there must be a strong resemblance, in many particulars, in the two cases. He relies much, I learn, upon his republicanism, inasmuch as he can bring many reputable persons to testify that he was one of the first in the parish, that cursed the British treaty, even before he saw it—and that he is ready to take his oath at any time, that he believes British gold was not idle when that treaty was signed; for he remembers very well, that shortly after a certain person returned to this country, he saw a guinea of that nation in circulation, which appeared quite fresh and new, and which was the first he had seen, ever since our happy revolution. Moreover, that he was the more impressed with this belief, because the man in whose hands he saw it, had then lately come from the northward. He also relies much upon the merit of his being a member of a democratic club in the parish, even from its first establishment, held at the sign of the Ax and Gibbet, a society, he boasts, that has done as much for true republican liberty, as any one in the United States. He values himself too, I am told, upon a variety of patriotic toasts he has given in the club, which are recorded in the proceedings of the same, and may be seen upon application to Tom Tipple, the barkeeper, and secretary of the club. With this large stock of desert, honest Paul makes himself sure of having the voice of his fellow citizens in his favor, and triumphs so much in the thought, that he anticipates the pleasure of seeing his persecutors at his feet, begging for mercy. He made a speech a few evenings ago in the club, I understand, on the occasion of his appeal, which gained him vast applause. When he had concluded, the universal cry of the members was, a Mattock! a Mattock! down with the vestry! down with the vestry!

Thus, Messieurs Printers, have I given you every thing I have been able to collect respecting the above cases. These, I suppose, are but a prelude to the many more that will possibly come before the public, as every man, from the diploma down to the warrant, is of sufficient consequence with himself, to indce him to believe the community at large to be so extremely interested in his individual concern, that they will put his own dear self in a balance against their affection for the general establishment. Inclining to this hope, Mr. Thomas Gripe, I imagine, expects, upon the defeat of his antagonists before the bar of the public, to obtain the chief justiceship of the county. His associates and the crier will certainly look for suitable advancement; and honest Paul, altho' he so far forgot his ecclesiastical character as to curse the treaty, will, no doubt, be made Parson of the parish. When this shall happen, or any further steps be taken towards these events, you shall have due information thereof, provided you take proper notice of my present communication.

I am yours,

A FARMER.

FROM THE GAZETTE OF THE UNITED STATES.

MR. FENNO,

READING in your paper of this evening an extract of a letter from Kentucky, brings to my recollection a piece of information I received from a gentleman in May last, from the North Western Territory, which very fully corroborates the opinion of La Chaise being a French emissary—This gentleman informs me that some months previous to his leaving Marietta he dined with several others in company with La Chaise. The conversation turning to politics, La Chaise said, that the French were soon to take possession of Louisiana and all Canada—that it would be necessary that the Western Countries should join the French, adding, we are already sure of Kentucky." The company very much resenting such sentiments obliged La Chaise to leave it. This gentleman further informed me, that La Chaise travelled through the country with a violin, and was in the constant habit of assembling a crowd about him, at the taverns where he stopped. After playing a few tunes he always ended with harrangues on the good qualities of the French, and the many blessings they might hereafter expect from them.

FROM A NEW-YORK PAPER OF AUGUST 12.

POOR GRIMALKIN!

A surprizing mortality among the cats has reached this city—many hundreds have died within a fortnight, but by the vigilance of our police officers, the streets are now clear of their putrid carcases. Philadelphia was lately visited with this cat sickness, where it is said several thousands died. About two years since it went through Europe. It does not appear that the disorder is epidemical among this species of domestic animals; for those which have not moved from the house have equally fallen a prey. They are taken with giddiness, then vomit, lose their appetite, and die in a few days. That it has not excited the investigation of our skilful physicians, is unaccountable.

INCENDIARIES.

It is said several men have been taken up at Albany, on suspicion of having set the city on fire.

FROM THE FARMER'S WEEKLY MUSEUM.

FROM THE SHOP OF MESSRS. COLON & SPONDEE.

WHILE the rational part of the community are loud in their plaudits of Mr. Thatcher's conduct, in declining, with contempt, the challenge of the bravo Blount, even men of double refined honour, if such men could generally read, might find precedents to justify Mr. Thatcher in the practice of courts of modern chivalry. During John Wilkes's exile in France, he was challenged by a Scotch officer, for reflecting upon his countrymen in the North Briton. Wilkes, whose personal courage was undisputed, and who afterwards actually fought a duel, declined the Scotchman's challenge; and his conduct was approved by the officers of the army and the navy, courtiers, pugilists, in the cock-pit, upon the turf, and at the bear-garden, and in all honorable places of resort for honorable gentlemen. The brain of the professed duellist could comprehend, that Wilkes, the editor of the North Briton, a public paper, was not obliged to risk his life against every critic. Mr. Thatcher offended Blount, when speaking in his place as a legislator: now if Mr. Thatcher was obliged to defend his argument with his sword, it is equally incumbent upon every other member of Congress to do it; and, in fine, Congress would soon resemble a Polish Diet, where all the members came armed cap a-pee—and we in New-Hampshire and Vermont, who only have learnt how to fight the enemies of our country, and never engage in any duels, except such as were fought at Bennington and Saratoga, must no longer give our suffrages to men noted for strong heads, but the nimble wrist; and he who can play cart and tierce must have a decided preference to the man, who can only derive good for his country, and enforce his opinions with fair reason.

A classical wit, speaking of the characteristic firmness of our President Adams, observed that he might be compared to the God Terminus, who, the ancient mythologists affirmed, would not move for Jupiter himself.

FROM EUROPE.

BOSTON, AUGUST 9.

Last evening an arrival from Liverpool, in 54 days, brought us London papers to June 10—four days later than before. The most interesting articles we have extracted. Another negociation for peace is opening between England and France: We have three corroborating articles in proof—those of London and Paris under those heads, and further that a packet boat actually sailed from Dover for France, June 1, to obtain a passport for a new envoy. The last papers announce the breaking up of the mutiny of the British seamen at the Nore; but capt. Aydelott informs us, this alluded to the secession from the mutiny of three or four ships, when the proclamation of the admiralty was made known to them. There are no accounts from Ireland, and capt. A. acquaints us, that the English were under no apprehensions from thence, the arm of government being strong there; and 12,000 men having been sent from England. Bridport's and Curtis's fleets were still at sea and in order.

PARIS, JUNE 6.

Intelligence of the greatest importance has reached us, which we have reason to believe authentic. It is, that yesterday Charles Delacroix received a courier from Lord Grenville, with new propositions for peace. We may therefore consider it as certain, England will be a party at the next Congress

LONDON, JUNE 10.

A dispatch is arrived from the Executive Directory of France to our government, with the answer to a requisition of a passport for the purpose of our sending an ambassador to Paris to treat for peace. We do not affect to have the answer literally; but the substance we understand to be "That the French are ready to enter upon the negociation, and that they will receive with gladness any person we may send to treat on behalf of this country."

On Thursday night a messenger was dispatched from Lord Grenville's office to Paris, with the name of the person to be sent as an ambassador to treat for peace, that the necessary passports may be made out. That person we understand to be Lord Auckland.

BREAKING UP OF THE MUTINY.

Our letters from Sheerness, dated last night, mention that capt. Knight, of the Montague, who on Thursday morning carried on board the two bills and proclamations, had been received by the fleet at the Nore with the greatest respect, and the most sanguine hopes were entertained of the best consequences arising from those acts of energy and spirit on the part of the legislature and the executive government of the country.

This morning the most agreeable and important intelligence was received at the admiralty from Sheerness.

Last night at the turn of the tide, several of the ships that had been declared in a state of rebellion, began to make a movement, and the Ardent, of 64 guns, Repulse of 64, and Leopard of 50, run into the mouth of Medway, behind the batteries of Sheerness.

Several other ships intended to follow them. The Montague would have followed immediately, but the officers and well affected part of the crew found they could not act offensively as the disaffected had poured oil into the touch holes of the guns.

The ships that came into Sheerness were a good deal damaged from the fire of the more obstinate of the rebels.

Sixteen of the leaders of the mutiny on board the ships that have got in, are in irons.

The crews of the ships that remain at the Nore, were dissatisfied with Parker, because he refused to communicate to them the two bills and proclamations. It is intended that he should this day be superceded in his command of the fleet.

A lieutenant and a midshipman belonging to the ships that have got in, were unfortunately mortally wounded.

We may now congratulate the country upon the breaking up of one of the most dangerous mutinies that has ever existed since the establishment of the British navy. We entertain no doubt of all the mutineers returning very speedily to their duty, and of the instigators and ringleaders of the rebellion being delivered up to the just vengeance of offended law.

Letters were received in town yesterday from vice admiral sir Allan Gardner, dated on Sunday last off Ushant. These, we understand, represent in the most explicit terms, that the fleet never was in a higher state of discipline and good order than it now is.

LIVERPOOL, JUNE 12.

From our correspondent in town, June 10, Saturday evening, 7 o'clock.

"An account at this moment arrived in town with the welcome information, that the mutiny at the Nore was at an end: the mutineers have surrendered, and President Parker has made his escape."

BOSTON, AUGUST 10.

We have seen a letter from Mr. Bulkley dated at Lisbon, 16th of June, to a respectable mercantile gentleman in Salem, which contains the following important postscript:

"I have just received a note from Mr. Yznardi, the American consul at Cadiz, of the 2d inst. informing me that he has received an order from the Spanish king, directing all bona fide American vessels detained in Spanish ports, to be immediately given up; and all those carried in on suspicion of having enemy's property on board, to have speedy trial."

The Executive Directory of France, have suspended the functions of citizens Raymond, Roume, Saint Laurent and Santhonax, in St. Domingo--this, comes officially; and was done in order to anticipate the resolution of the two councils, by which they would have been compelled to adopt this measure.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in France, to his friend in this town, dated May 30th, 1797.

"The manly and spirited letter of Mr. Pickering to Mr. Pinckney, is considered by the first advocates in Paris as a masterpiece, and unanswerable; it has been translated and delivered to both houses, who are extremely well pleased and satisfied with it; and are about demanding, in consequence of it, all the papers relative the American affairs, from the directory; and should a minister be now sent out, every thing would soon return to its former pleasant situation."

THE subscribers heretofore by advertisement, bearing date upon the 9th May, 1797, gave public notice to the creditors of the late Peter Cassanave, that a dividend of the assets which had then come to the hands of his administrators, would be made among his creditors on the 16th day of August, 1797—but being advised that they cannot by law make such dividend in less than twelve months after the decease of the said Cassanave, and that period not yet elapsed since his death, notice is hereby given, that it is apprehended by the subscribers, that the deceased, Peter Cassanave, has not left personal estate sufficient to satisfy the debts due by him; all those therefore who have any claims or demands against the said Peter Cassanave's estate, are requested to bring in their claims, duly proved and authenticated to the subscribers on Tuesday the 12th day of October, in the year one thousand, seven hundred and ninety seven, at the house of Clement Sewall, in George-Town;—on that day and at that place the subscribers will proceed to divide among the creditors of Peter Cassanave, in the manner the law directs, the assets which have then come to their hands.

The ship George, of New-York, 24 days from Liverpol, bound to this port, was spoke on July 12 in lat. 45, 21, long. 37, 27.

A letter from New-York, dated August 13, says, "I am just informed that the Captain of the Hancock, on his passage from Belfast, spoke two English armed ships ten days out from Cork, who informed him, that all the mutiny-ships at the Nore had come over to government, except one which had on board Parker and the other delegates—they offered to give themselves up, on condition of a pardon which was refused by government. I believe this may be depended on—I am now about ascertaining it more particularly—but I shall be too late for the mail if I delay closing my letter."

AGRICULTURAL.

A gentleman in Bohemia has lately discovered, that mineral coal, ground or broken small, is an excellent manure, equal, if not superior, to Plaister of Paris, in promoting the vegetation of grasses, and especially of clover. This discovery is of the greatest importance to the inland parts of this country, where coal is abundant. It must be used in somewhat larger quantities than plaister of Paris.

FROM THE MERCHANT'S DAILY ADVERTISER.

MR. BRADFORD,

BY inserting the following in your useful paper, you will render a service to humanity.

An antidote against the bilious complaints at this season of the year

Aloes, Columbia root, and anniseed, an ounce of each put into a pint of spirits, and after standing some time, half a wine glass of it in a tumbler of water, taken in the morning—it strengthens the stomach and gives a passage, is a fine purge, as costiveness in body is a source of disorders.

EXPERIENCE.

N. B. I wish our physicians would please to prescribe a preventative for bilious disorders, as an ounce of it is worth many pounds of cure. I know they have the goodness of heart and humanity, if people will hear.

FROM THE CENTINEL OF LIBERTY.

A FASHIONABLE BET; OR, GEORGE TOWN ARGUMENT.

"A few days since, a slight altercation arose, between two merchants of this place; respecting, the difference, in the price, on a parcel of flour, which the one sold to the other, to have been half fine, half superfine. It being more convenient, was delivered all superfine: consequently, a small additional sum was to have been paid by the purchaser which the one said was so much, and the other so much per barrel. But it not being customary for Georgetown gentlemen, to call in the aid of logic or sound reasoning, on such occasions, the argument was immediately backed by one of them, with a bet of 100 barrels of flour, which the other, with equal avidity, agreed to, (as we may readily, suppose not wishing to be out done and full of the spirit of betting peculiar to Georgetown.) Upon reference being had, it appears the purchaser lost the flour, and the winner being a moderate man, was content to receive in the room of the flour, the small sum of 400 dollars, in consideration of its being the work of a few seconds, and attended with no expence, this sum the loosing gentleman most honorably and immediately paid.

Thus, in George-town, we win and lose hundreds of dollars in a few seconds; but ask if money is scarce—I'll venture to say, you are answered, Damn'd scarce! Hard times! Does this look much like it? I think not! However, good people, be advised, let all those who make use of the George-Town Argument, first be sure to have the winning side, lest you fall into rigid hands, and then, if not possessed of that wonderful knack of laughing & twisting yourself out of such scrapes by saying you were only joking, I can assure you, you will not find money so very plenty, nor perhaps will it set better on your stomachs than it does on the poor gentleman's, who found it a very serious joke, when he came to dowse the 400 dollars.

NEW-YORK, AUGUST 14.

We have it in our power to lay before the public, the following important particulars. A gentleman from Ireland received a letter on Thursday evening, from his connections there, stating that the dissensions in that country had arisen to a most alarming pitch. That the Duke of Leinster has enclosed his titular badge under cover to the king, acquainting his majesty, he could no longer consent to wear as an ensignia of rank and honor, that which was become a mark of disgrace, and that he wishes only to be known as a United Irishman.

That the post-master general of Ireland has resigned his office, worth at least 3,000 pounds sterling per annum, declaring he could no longer reconcile to himself holding an office under the present order of things, and that he is also a United Irishman.

That the city of Dublin, has proclaimed itself for the united party, and declares that any attempt of the government to coerce them, will produce open rebellion.

The letter is written in Dublin—we regret we have not been able to ascertain its date, but the gentleman to whom it came was in the city only a few hours, and left it on Friday morning, without giving any publicity to the accounts he had received. He had engaged his passage to return to Ireland, but this letter advises him to remain in this country till he hears something further from home. We have every reason from the respectability of our authority, to give full credit to the above.

PHILADELPHIA, AUGUST 14.

Captain Rice of the ship George, arrived here this day, informs, that he was at Lisbon, on the 18th June last (the day before he sailed from St. Ubes) and was there informed by the American consul, Mr. Tolardo, that the French and Spanish armies had entered the frontiers of Portugal in three different bodies. Captain Rice says, that this news was currently reported at the exchange in Lisbon, and was generally believed.

AUGUST 15.

Within these few days, some of our fellow-citizens have been considerably alarmed, from a fear of being again visited by that cruel destroyer, the Yellow Fever. This has arisen from a very violent Bilious Fever having carried off several persons in Penn-street; but we trust, from the very cold weather which we now experience, there is no serious cause of fear.

There is scarcely a Jacobin printer who has not poured forth the most pathetic lamentations for the fate of poor M'Lean—which are succeeded, very naturally, by the bitterest invectives against the barbarity of the British government, in executing justice upon him. The fact is, they consider M'Lean as a lost brother—a martyr, whose fate they have themselves individually a thousand times merited. His ignominious end has convinced them, that though treachery may long pass unpunished, yet it may sometimes meet its just reward—It is a monitor, pointing, to their terrified imaginations, a slow and moving finger towards the gibbet. Thus perish all traitors!

(G. U. S.)

A prisoner in Hartford goal, named London Doney, while chained to the block to work at Nail making, in a fit of desperation, called for an ax for the purpose of wedging his stake, which he pretended was loose, and apparently securing it, until he found the eyes of the centinels were otherwise engaged, when availing himself of the moment, he laid his left hand flat on his block, and gave a stroke with the axe, which nearly separated the three first fingers from the hand about the knuckle joint, when, finding, he had not rendered his hand useless, he turned the same over and gave a second blow, close to his hand, which cut one of his fingers off, and the other two nearly; he then deliberately with the edge of the axe, as his hand lay on the block, sawed off the remaining sinews and skin, before his intentions were discovered so as to prevent him!—This is a most striking proof of the utter abhorrence dissolute characters have for labor, and consequently of its being an appropriate punishment for them.
